Description

Full stack web development means working with the front end, and back end ie the database of any web application or website. So in one word, from designing a website to doing database security with development, full-stack web development is everything we need. Among all the tech stacks used in the web development sector today, MERN Stack is the most popular and in demand. The MERN stack mainly deals with 4 topics namely: MongoDB, Express.JS, React.JS, Node.JS. In this MERN Stack, we are getting all the topics of full-stack web development.

Those who primarily work on full-stack development are called full-stack developers. A full-stack developer is in high demand in the current market. All companies, big and small, have one or more websites requiring a skilled web developer. As the workplace grows with the times, so do the jobs of web developers. Personal qualifications and skills are more important than educational qualifications if you want to work as a full-stack developer. In many cases recruitment is based on merit.

Currently, the demand for web developers is constantly increasing and will increase even more. A professional full-stack web developer can work both offline and online if desired. How much a full-stack web developer earns will depend on his work skills and experience. However, depending on the skill, in some companies, the salary ranges from 20 thousand takas to 1 lakh and more.
